A Crazy St. Patrick's Day

Last week, [name #1]'s teacher reminded the class that Monday was St. Patrick's Day. But [name #1] forgot to wear [color]. All the other children tried to pinch him/her all day long. "[Expression]," he/she cried every time anyone [verb (-ed)] him/her. What [adjective] luck!

Then, [name #1] saw something that would turn his/her luck around! In the corner of the room, he/she saw something [verb (-ing)]. At first he/she thought it was just a little [animal]. But when he/she [verb (-ed)] again, he/she realized it was a [adjective] leprechaun.

If he/she could find a way to [verb] that leprechaun, he/she would be the [adjective (-est)] kid in all of [Place] Elementary School. He/she picked up his/her [object] – it was just the right size to hold the leprechaun. He/she tiptoed [adverb] to the corner. He/she could [verb] the leprechaun clearly now. He/she flung his/her open backpack over the leprechaun's [body part], but he was too [adjective].

[name #1] turned around to see the leprechaun [verb (-ing)] on all the children's heads, then he [verb (-ed)] right out the door. [name #1] ran to the door. The leprechaun just [verb (-ed)] at him/her, ran right between his/her [body part (plural)] back into the room, and jumped onto the teacher's [type of furniture].

[name #1] dove across the room at the leprechaun, but the leprechaun [verb (-ed)] out the window. By the time [name #1] made it to the window, the leprechaun was no where to be [verb (-ed)]. [name #1] felt [feeling] and went [adverb] back to his/her desk. There he/she found a gift from the leprechaun! He had left [name #1] a small, [color] shamrock pin! [name #1] pinned in to his/her [article of clothing]. He/she no longer had to worry about being pinched because now he/she wore the St. Patrick's color! "Thanks [adjective] leprechaun!" he/she said.
